Two American college roommates, a British Tour Guide and an Australian tourist join in the south of France to investigate the legend that Mary Magdalene spent the last 30 years of her life there spreading the Gospel that she learned intimately from the lips of Jesus. While the information they obtained pre-dated the release of "The DaVinci Code," it basically confirmed the information later published in that book. This book is the account of a personal journey of discovery, containing much easily accessible information from esoterica and culinary delights to an imaginary account of the last few days of Mary Magdalene's life in her Cave in Provence.
